

Self Reflection on the Project:

Ofir Deri

I liked to learn new things and have fun with my partner while working on this project.

What I liked the least about working on this project was the text editor on the computer that always made problems for us...

The most difficult part of the project was summing up our results and conclusions.

The easiest part of the project was choosing the topic as it is already a big part of our lives.

Doing this project made me a more independent learner as I had to find many different articles on the subject and extract the right information. It also improved my writing skills as I had to formulate correct sentences. I learned about myself that I enjoy learning about subjects that affect my life.

Marko came up with the subject and the research questions and made sure we keep up with the schedule while I helped with wording the sentences.
